

Harrison County

Quick Response Team

The Harrison County Quick Response Team is a collaborative effort involving law enforcement, mental health providers, medical care providers, and first responders. It's designed to provide support to individuals within 24 to 72 hours following an overdose.. This is considered the "recovery window", a time when individuals with a substance use disorder are thought to be more open to accepting help. The Project CARE initiative links individuals to treatment right at their doorstep, turning a crisis into an opportunity.
